the tribuna! charged with the business of reproaching "Revolution" as "the part of Russian newspapers." The Emperor's Highness Grand Duke to Prince Dagar is still the occasion of the comedy Princesse de Urs Major, and the wonderful sketch entertained offered by the nobility to the Imperial family, by night, of the Emperor's Highness Grand Duke to Prince Dagar, given by the Emperor to 400 of the nobility, the details of which, in their lavish and picturesque splendour, make one think of the Princesse de Urs Major.

Prussia is still busy with the rest of Germany, Austria with the various heterogeneous elements of which she is composed, and of which the only contained one appears to be the Slavonic race. The Emperor's Highness Grand Duke to Prince Dagar has been standing out for, and whose Parliament is still in full Hungarian costume, full trousers, embroidered waistcoats, and a high collar, and a high collar of deep fur, full of ruffles of raim. Truly, "Time whittles" does "bring about many revenges."

Italy, with her elections; the moderate party having obtained, up to the present time, a decided advantage over the extreme parties opposed to them. Prince Dagar is anxious to start a "Corte in search of a wife," and the various "Princesses of the Empire" are available princesses now on hand. He will visit the Court of Vienna, St. Petersburg, Berlin, and Paris, beginning with the latter, and will be accompanied by his wife, the marry the beautiful and highly accomplished young Princess Della Cisterna, the richest heiress of Italy, whose only child is the Emperor's Highness Grand Duke to Prince Dagar, and whose mother have just been crowned Highness by the King.

The King, in his last election, has elected Victor Emmanuel as "King of Italy" for the first time, and has elected the Duke of Umbria and the Marchese, abstained from an alliance to the "spoilation" of those former fiefs of the Emperor's Highness Grand Duke to Prince Dagar, and the wind-currents hitherto so boisterous between the Vatican and Florence.

of the flag of Hungary, and the advantages of forming a colony in the East, and of settling in a country where he will end his days in a foreign land; and adds, "You know that I cannot, and ought not, to accept an offer of such a kind, which would be tantamount to the saying, 'I have forsaken my fatherland! I do!' The sufferer years of exile have broken my strength."

It is said to see two men who unselfish attachment to their country has been so unwavering as that of Kossuth and his friends, and who, after having lived through the hour of triumph, and unable to rejoice in the new era of prosperity opening upon their respective countries, because of the loss of their country, have nevertheless so powerfully contributed, has not taken place easily in conformity with their personal theories and desires.

The Emperor of Austria has just decreed the erection of the fortifications of Vienna, so recently being pushed on with so much activity as to suggest the existence, among the councillors of the Kaiser, of anticipations of a new war, and the necessity of preparing a plan of fortifying that city will be definitively abandoned.

The Italian elections seem likely to give a large majority to the party of the King, and the Emperor-electors of Alexandria, which city he has represented for the last 18 years, a full and clear declaration of principle, as against the party of the Emperor-electors, of Florence, previous to the preceding elections.

Rizzatti declares himself an advocate of the complete severance of Church and State, of the secularization of the property of the Church, and of the shortening of the length, the policy of Rizzatti. This manifesto of the clever, able statesman, who is personally (for Victor Emmanuel is not personally a Catholic) a Catholic, and who has private sentiments to influence his King, of his public duties) so great a favour to the King, is certainly not the work of a President of the Republic, and possibly indicates a willingness on his part to take office as President, and that the marriage of the Duke of Aosta, Victor Emmanuel's second son, with an Italian mistress, being very young, and of a low rank, is a purely, and with no attempt at royal pomp or ceremony.

constitutional King of Hungary is to take place in the latter part of the year, and will be a splendid, imposing, and patriotic festival.

Kevenhet has published a letter, in which he has affirmed the authenticity of the letter recently published under the same relations, and giving a sort of modified approval of the new arrangement to two of the three persons named in it. He has also endeavored to disprove of the present arrangements, and will of course, even should he maintain, until the day of his death, the flag of 1848, even should he be obliged to do so.

So impossible does it seem for those who have fought for a given end under a theoretic banner to accept the achievement of that end, by another means than the triumph of their own particular cause.

The bickering between Croatia and Hungary is not yet ended. Hungary offers to allow to Croatia an independent administration, but Croatia will not accept of such matters, insisting on a joint administration into which for interests equally affecting the two peoples. Croatia would require to be represented by a king, and Hungary would require a king; but to this desire Hungary opposes the ancient constitutional tie between herself and the subject kingdoms of Croatia, Dalmatia, and Transylvania, and demands its restoration.

King William has been very anxious to study, and declaring that Austria is quite indifferent to the arrangements entered into with Prussia by the world's great powers, and that Austria was nothing objectionable in those arrangements. King William, on his side, when receiving the news of the arrangement, on the 10th of May, took occasion to express sympathetically to the French and English ambassadors, on his conviction that the peace of Europe is in no danger of being broken. Most anxious to see the Emperor of Russia, and to see his Prussian Majesty on the occasion; and many of the wagers of minor crowns have gone to Berlin to pay their respective bets.

The marriage of the Count de Flandres with a niece of King William will be celebrated early next month; that of the Emperor of Russia with his cousin, the Princess Sophie, takes place the 10th of June.

He was lifted up, but died immediately.

THE SCUTTLING OF THE SEVEN.—It will be remembered that four prisoners, named Webb, Holdsworth, Berridge, and Dunn, were convicted during the last session of the Manchester Assizes, of the murder of Captain Drummond, the gentleman who conducted the scuttling, had an interview with Webb, at his own request, and he was then convinced that he was guilty of the crime. FIRE ON A RAILWAY.—A singular accident happened 1 mile and a half from the station of Wakefield, on the railway, near Ellersbury. After the passage of the first up train the signalman went to his breakfast, leaving a large box on the rails, and a small box containing a quarter of a pound of gunpowder. At 10 o'clock a second train passed, and the box was discovered to be on fire. It was extinguished by a sharp wind, rapidly ceased, and in a very short time the box was completely burned down. The telegraph wires were not injured, and the train was not stopped. At the other stations being served the traffic was stopped till a pilot engine could be got ready and sent down the line to the station.

form a powerful instrument of our work on

wide construction of libel brings almost any kind of adverse criticism within its scope. Thus a Judge may direct, and a jury may choose to arrive at the conclusion, that whatever is stated of an adverse nature, lowers a man in public opinion, and that this, therefore, is the very essence of libel. Yet, in point of fact, the men who are thrusting themselves every hour before the public are in the opinion of all who know them, utterly unworthy to fill public positions, from their personal character, from their former relations, from their visible subservience to faction, and from their continual efforts to acquire through their political influence personal benefits. All this is seen every hour and everywhere. The Ministers are in the hands of such men, and return

The only possible check to it is exposure. That exposure, in almost every instance, if definite and effective, would run the hazard of a libel. If there be any failure in the minutest point of justification the verdict goes for the defendant with a large amount of costs. Some Judges, no doubt, improperly guide the jury to a verdict for the defendant. But, on the other hand, we sometimes find a verdict contrary to the clearest evidence, under an idea that it is for the public advantage to violate the law. The administration of the law of libel is a mass of difficulty, and often of flagrant absurdity. It is particularly true in this—that one man may steal a horse, but another may not look over the fence. So much room is left for the play of prejudice and party antagonism, that it is hardly possible for any case to be decided purely upon its own merits or without the jury having been influenced by considerations unknown to the law and unrecognised in the Courts. In many cases this is foreseen and provided against by changing the venue. In civil cases the instances are very rare when any one would doubt the equal chances of equity in the adjudication of a local jury. But in cases of libel it is not so. In often happens that large numbers of persons have been enlisted on one side, and that the issue of a trial is a matter of luck. The delay of a few days will make all the difference. There are certain letters of the alphabet on the jury list which will show pretty surely what will be the issue of the trial when confined to such names. Indeed, considering the extraordinary collection of nationalities brought within the colonies and the clanship of primitive races, we may take this fact as constituting one very serious drawback to the trial by jury. One man would be perfectly safe with the Smiths and the Robinsons, but in peril if fortune should consign him to the Macs and the O's. On the other hand the Smiths would be dangerous to a plaintiff who might be perfectly secure if the O's and the Macs had ship and

The changing of the venue in the case of the Bathurst libel doubtless operated unfavourably for the defendants. Reading a list of libels spreading over many years to persons to whom all the parties were unknown would naturally have the impression of a long-continued and bitter persecution. The antagonistic feelings by which these criticisms might be provoked and often retaliated could not come into view unless the plaintiff could be clearly connected with them. Persons judging such a case upon the spot would probably know of their own personal knowledge the merits of the whole quarrel from first to last, and would be able to connect each part of the series with its alleged provocation, which might thus abate in their minds the virulence of attack. On the other hand, the vituperation of a public man would present itself as an aggravated offence to those who regarded his position as the performance of a useful task, and as having exposed him to unmerited obloquy. All who take an office, and particularly one, the

and discharge of the duties of aldermen councilmen, are entitled to the sympathy and protection of the people at large. The presumption should be, a-

office, and particularly one, the

councilmen, are entitled to the sympathy and protection of the people at large. The presumption should be, a-facts certainly justify, in favour of the integrity of their movements and the absence of that gross malversation which popular opinion
attaches to all office.

We believe there are many abuses; that in all large cities there are men who make for public offices to pervert them to their own sordid views. They spare no pains to get into the secret of corruption and to enjoy its fruits. But a prolonged and general observation of men in such positions would greatly abate the suspicion which is commonly entertained. We believe that in municipal offices the cost incurred by those who fill them is upon the whole greater than the advantages they acquire. It will be a very dark day for the race of Englishmen when there is a settled disgust for public duties, and when people come to feel that the only result of popular choice is to make them slaves of one party and the butt of another.

Considering all the circumstances, we certainly feel that the damages were very heavy, and crushing on the parties who have incurred them. If people will write libels they must take their chances with a jury, and some of these libels are very bitter. Some of the accusations are obviously mistaken and unfounded. Some, we understand, are not construed by those who made them as implying the personal corruption of the

them as implying the personal corruption they suggest. It was impossible for any jury not to give a verdict to the plaintiff, considering the failure of the defence. It can never be for the public good that the liberty of the Press should extend so far as to allow a continuous and bitter pursuit of any public man. If his conduct is deserving of reproach, it should be stated in a measured and deliberate form, and upon such evidence as will bear the inspection of a jury. But an endless torrent of innuendo and imputation which cannot be submitted to any exact test, or supported by any effective proof, is not at all desirable. The position of the Press is a very hard one; but it would be a frightful thing if the possession of such power as it may give should be exercised without restraint and without responability. As far as we can perceive the plaintiff has not, in this action has done nothing which would justify, or forfeit the confidence of his fellow-citizens, and, having vindicated his reputation, we hope that all other considerations may moderate his resentment.

The case of the Melbourne libel is one of those of far more public interest. There are some facts thrown out which will not be allowed to sleep. The evidence was satisfactory to the jury that, although every word of the libels could not be vindicated, the plaintiff had employed his influence as a member of parliament in procuring improper advantages. The evidence was also clear that the same parties for whom these efforts were made, were contributors to a fund called a Trading with the Enemy fund, which was

SUDDEN DEATH AT NEWTOWN.—The inquiry respecting the death of Mrs. Isabella Wills, which took place suddenly at her husband's residence, Newtown, on Sunday last, was resumed before the City Coroner, yesterday, at the Kingston Hotel, Newtown. From the evidence it appears that, on Sunday morning last, deceased was the mother of a child, and was attended by Mrs. Saxby, a professional midwife. After remaining with deceased about three hours, Mrs. Saxby left her, about half-past 7 o'clock, stating to see another patient at Sydney, and left directions to the husband to give deceased twelve drops of chloroform. If he found it necessary to give more, to give

Mrs. Starkey remained with deceased for about an hour, she again left and went home, leaving directions for twelve drops of laudanum to be given to deceased if he continued in pain. According to the husband's evidence, the laudanum was not given, but in lieu of it he gave him eight more drops of chlorodyne; the deceased gradually grew weaker, and the husband becoming alarmed, he sent, about 8 o'clock in the evening, for Mrs. Starkey, who returned with him, and on seeing deceased, she requested a doctor might be sent for. The husband called in Dr. Hobbs, who sent for a doctor, who arrived at 11 o'clock.

Dr. Byers was nearly dumb, and, on his arrival de-

Boes stated that when he first saw deceased she had the appearance of a person in a stupor from having taken an excess of narcotic, and he gave her three grains of ammonium sulphate dissolved in water, but without producing any good results, the treatment as he had been described in evidence was not that ordinarily pursued on such occasions. By the doctor's directions a post mortem examination was made by Dr. Byers, assisted by Dr. Hobbs. Dr. Byers stated it was the history of the case, and the post mortem examination, that the cause of death was himself from exhaustion and nervous depression consequent upon vomiting succeeding childbirth. The jury returned a verdict in accordance with the medical evidence, and added that they were of opinion that deceased received due care and attention. Deceased has left six children.

SUICIDE AT NEWTON.—An inquiry respecting the death of a man, named Henry Sherry, about twenty-nine years of age, was held before the City Coroner yesterday, at Terminus Inn, Newton. Sergeant Flaherty said that on information he received from Dr. Sedgwick, about five past 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning, he drove to

By the time he had finished his breakfast, he had been informed that the body of George Bryant had been found in the premises of George Bryant stated that he was a carter; deceased was married with him for the last two years; and about a quarter of 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning he saw deceased in the street, he having been laid up for the last five days with rheumatism; at that time he observed nothing strange in deceased's appearance, nor did he observe any signs of insanity; he told him a short time ago that he had been married to a man named White, and had recently been leaving to recover the money; deceased was a man of etary embarrassment; he had left no relations in the city; on Tuesday morning, at deceased's request, he went into Sydney to see White, to obtain £10 from him; White did not pay him anything; he then returned home, he found deceased dead; about nine or ten months deceased complained of not being able to recover any of the money he had lent to White, but he never said he would take it away with himself; deceased was not an ascetic, and was fond of society. Andrew Jarman stated that he resided in the same house as the deceased; he went into deceased's bedroom about half-past 5 o'clock on Tuesday morning; he found him lying half out of bed, striding on a chair; he asked what made him do that, when deceased said Wright had robbed him, and was warning him again; deceased gnashed his teeth, and asked for that which he might shoot himself; deceased turned his eyes another part of the room, and exclaimed, "I see him—long-tailed monkey;" deceased said he would on his coat as soon as he (witness) left the room; he returned to the room every instant with which deceased might be injured himself; deceased then got better and appeared cheerful; he was a man of cheerful disposition, and fond society, and there was nothing in his conduct to lead to supposition that his brain was affected. Dr. Schaefer ated that since Saturday last he had attended to the case of a man suffering from measles, about 6 o'clock on Sunday morning he was sent for to see a woman; did not go, but sent some medicine to have him; he called to see him about twenty minutes later; and on asking how the man was, he was told that the medicine had given him great relief; he went up stairs to see if the man was better, and found the patient, who was to have died, had recovered; he then returned to his window was open he called out to Mr. Bryant that the man was not in bed; they looked over the house, but were unable to find him; on looking into the yard next door he saw the man lying on the ground; he then returned to the well uncovered it struck him that the deceased had own himself down; as there was no rope on the premises enough to reach to the bottom of the well, which was twenty-five feet deep, he gave information to the coroner, Sergeant Flaherty, who procured grappling from a lumbered the body from the well in his presence; but the victim extinct when the body was taken out of the well, his cause of death was asphyxia from drowning; when he was raised on Sunday he was perfectly conscious, and exhibited no signs of insanity. Verdict: "Decayed mental condition by drowning, having thrown himself down a well while labouring under a fit of temporary insanity."

quity yesterday, at the Observatory Tower, George Smith, Jr., respecting the death of a young man, Herman W. Walker, of age, named Joseph Thomas Coleman. Decerned as an ordinary seaman on board the bergsman schooner, Walker's stage, and on Tuesday morning last he was employed on a wharf, painting the outside of the vessel, when he accidentally fell into the water. No other person was seen to be him at the time, but another sailor named Frederick Jackson heard a cry, and went to the head of the vessel to see what was the matter, when he saw Coleman's cap floating in the water; deceased was not seen to rise, and information of the occurrence having been given, the tugboat

100, constable William Martin, who gave drugs and provided to drag for the body, and in the course of doing the officer of an hour or so succeeded in bringing it to the surface of the water, after which he conveyed it to the dead-house. Dr. Shaw examined the body, and stated the cause was of opinion that death had resulted from asphyxia by drowning. Verdict: "Accidentally drowned."

MELANCHOLY OCCURRENCE AT NEWCASTLE.—A sad and fatal accident occurred at the Junction on Saturday morning last, by which a man and a lad twelve years of age, named respectively Richard Hadaway and Arthur Well, lost their lives. It appears that deceased and two men were loading bricks from a kiln belonging to Brennan's father, when the roof suddenly and unexpectedly gave way and about 6000 bricks fell in, burying the two store men and severely injuring the others. Dr. Flores, the district coroner, held an inquest on the bodies on the same afternoon, and James Bowtell, one of the witnesses, in the course of his evidence stated that Hadaway was not in his place when the accident occurred, but had come from Milwaukee that morning on the look out for work, and, on being employed to witness, had been promised permanent employment on the following Monday. Just as he was leaving to return to the train, a dray came up for a load of bricks, be then turned back and offered to assist. The offer was accepted, and Haddaway immediately went into the house and commenced work with young Bowtell, but had not been so engaged for more than a quarter of an hour when the roof fell in on top of them, killing both on the spot. Haddaway was a resident of Maidland, and his wife and family totally unprovided for. Both the bodies were fearfully mutilated, and so large was the mass of bricks on top of them that it was not until nearly half an hour afterwards that they were recovered. The jury returned a verdict of "Accidental death."

W.—The Design of yesterday states that, owing to the inclement state of the weather, it was decided at a special meeting of the Hunter River Agricultural and Horticultural Association, held on Tuesday, that the show, which was advertised to take place to-day and to-morrow, should be postponed until some further period, to be determined at next meeting. It was with considerable reluctance the committee had taken this step, but there was no alternative left them—the rain came being, from the heavy rains, totally unfit for the purpose of the exhibition. Another obstacle stood in the way of the success of the show, even if held at this time, namely, impossibility of many of the cattle and sheep holding their ground in time, in consequence of the pasture not being worked. Should the weather become settled in a week or two hence, it is likely the committee will not delay longer than they can see cause for.

BUGGY ACCIDENT AT SINGELTON.—A very painful accident occurred on Monday forenoon to Miss Purcell, of this place, while driving to town in a buggy with her two sisters, and leaving left one of them at Mr. Kingdon's, he got out, leaving his other sister at the vehicle in charge of the driver. MYSTERIOUS MURDER—A shepherd was murdered at Glendinning, near Darling Downs, about fourteen days ago. The blacks found the shepherd dead and his sheep scattered about the country; they took the sheep and the shepherd, &c., to the head station. WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

Alluding to political matters the Perth Gazette of the 29th remarks:—"The only topic which has engaged public attention since the late lamented Governor's death, has been the memorial to the Secretary of State on the subject of the Land Regulations. It is the production of three or four settlers, and is being handed about the colony for circulation. The alterations which are comprised in the following paragraphs:—"To remedy the evils now complained of, we would propose, that instead of the arbitrary line now drawn without reference as to whether the land is to be sold or not, that the land should be divided into districts, and that within each district land should be selected by the Government for sale, suitable for the purposes of agriculture, and that the balance of the available demand; such land to be placed in Class A, and subdivided into sections adjoining each other, to be open for purchase at any time without auction, in blocks of 100 acres or upwards, and that the balance of the land should be placed in class B for pastoral occupation, and let on lease for a period of eight years at least, and not open to purchase at any time without auction, in blocks of 100 acres or upwards. The Government should consider that any portion of the land on lease was absolutely required for agricultural purposes, to resume such land in blocks of 100 acres or upwards, at the expiration of the lease, in session until a further resumption became necessary, the lessee being entitled to all reasonable compensation from the Government. The Government should consider that any lease on which no improvements have been effected on the land so resumed. Upon the termination of his lease, the lessee to have a right of renewal for another term of eight years, with the same conditions as the first term, the Government should absolutely require for cultivation.

The Monitor of the 28th of April last publishes a useful transcript of hydrographic information regarding the Polynesian Islands, communicated to the British Admiralty by Captain Charles Hooper of the Brist. The information is in reference to the islands of the Tonga, the Fanning Islands, and Savaili, the Sunda Group, and to those isolated points—Wallis Island (or Uva), and the Island of Rotomah, and Curtis Island.

Latest intelligence from Bokhara states that the Russians are fortifying their position near that city; they are reported to have captured 13,000 head of cattle and 100,000 sheep. The Envoy from Bokhara, who recently visited Calcutta to solicit aid from the Viceroy to expel the Russians from Bokhara, has now gone to Turkey to prefer a similar request to the Sultan.

A story comes to us from Bokhara that the Russian Government has deprived the King of all his royal dignities, and removed him from the throne, and has appointed officers of the new Russian State. This high-handed measure of the Government of India is said to have arisen on hearing that the Government of England would not sustain the King to expel the Russians.

Heavy rains have fallen in the Punjab, and the distress occasioned at one time seemed imminent in consequence of the drought.

The Government had observed a policy of watchfulness and was opposed to exclusive alliances. It was not disposed to ally itself with England, with Austria, or with Prussia, nor to engage in conquest, but to solve by diplomatic interference the various questions as they arise. The simple order of the day, in other words, a vote of confidence in the foreign policy of the Government was thus passed by 219 votes against 45.

In the course of the day, Mr. Rothery made a most exciting speech.

M. Rothery said :—

The only legitimate Government is that in whose name I am now speaking. It was consecrated by the vote of the nation. It is the Government of the people. I am not here to discuss the merits of the Government when another Government was in power. I am here to discuss the merits of the Government of the people in the affairs of the country and disposing of all the means of the country.

of agreement between the Banks of Bengal and Bombay are considered settled as far as the directors of the two institutions are concerned. Mr. Dickson leaves the question of the propriety of the Bank of Bengal's ratification of the Order, however, to the members of the Council. The President: I consider that the Council have not received permission to speak, and therefore do not address the Chamber.

Mr. Thiers: I am speaking up again pronounced some words which were lost in the noise and agitation.

The President: I must request M. Thiers to sit down.

M. Reuther: I could only hear in M. Thiers that I interrupted the single word "proscribed."

M. J. W. Lawrence: I was surprised, and, contrary to law. (Cries of "Order, order.")

The President: I demand silence, and I will certainly call to order whoever makes any interruption.

M. Reuther: I have to say to M. Thiers that I had no intention of arousing in his mind either a painful emotion or disagreeable reminiscence. I only wanted to state that the Government of Bombay had been saved from anarchy. (Cries of "Yes, yes," and violent interruptions on some benches.)

The Viceroy and suite are expected to leave Calcutta for Simla between the 15th and 26th of April. The rumour that the Viceroy will retire at the end of the year has been contradicted.

The Government of India has commenced publishing the Official Gazette of the British Empire. The statement just published brings the accounts down to October 31, 1866.

The Government of India has authorised the immediate payment of the first instalment of the Banda Kirwore prize money, at the rate of £500 a share.

The Government have been sent to India to organise a grand hunting expedition in the interior for the Duke of Edinburgh when H. K. H. visits Bombay in the (the Left). The principle of nationalities, the sovereignty of the populations, alone establish Governments. It is the only form of Government which is the only form in which regular Governments can be constituted, and such persons as protest against the sovereignty of the people are nothing else but factious. (Violent interjections.)

M. Ernest Picard: It is you who are factious.

M. Thiers again rose suddenly, and uttered some words which were not heard.

M. Eugene Pelletan: Yes, it is you who are factious. It is you who violated the national sovereignty and universal suffrage. (Cries of "Order, order.")

With effort, may be gratified to learn that this process is already going on to a very considerable extent. By a parliamentary return just issued it appears that among the sales of land effected in 1865 and 1866 by the Irish Land Commission, 117 were of 10 acres and upwards, 46 between 5 and 10 acres, 106 between 20 and 50, and these were in addition to a vast number of sales including houses with small plots of land (sometimes not very small) attached to them.
